You may have friends or acquaintances whose ideas and concepts about God vary considerably from your own. Some people even claim that God doesn't exist. Others believe that the idea of God is too great for people to know or understand. However, all through the ages people have been inspired by the great forces of nature and felt the wonder of the world around them. God has been seen as having qualities such as Love, Beauty and Truth, the highest and most noble words we can think of, and most faiths have been able to recognize these qualities as divine.

It is difficult for some people to tolerate difference, holding firmly to the belief that their idea of God is the only true one. This can lead to misunderstanding, fear of others, and all too often, the tragedy of war.

All the sacred scriptures and great teachers of the past and present, wise men and women, teach that killing is wrong. The main practice of all religions is to learn to treat each other with respect and love. Of course most ordinary people, being only human, do not achieve this all at once. It takes time and dedication to put these virtues into practice.
