Luke and Acts (1-21:15) Essay Questions

General comments

The marks covered the full range with evidence of some excellent answers. As in previous years, there was a growing number of candidates displaying detailed knowledge of the text and good understanding of the material. Their answers were focused and clearly expressed.

There was also improvement in candidates' ability to answer the part (b) evaluative questions. The level descriptors make clear that level 3 and 4 involve more than a "purely descriptive approach". There needs to be a willingness to engage with the material and a need to be selective, noting the focus of the question.

Comments on specific questions

Section A

Question 1

- (a) This was a popular question. However, the focus on "what the angel reveals about the person and future work of John" was often omitted. Instead, a narrative about Zechariah in the Temple and the angel saying that Zechariah would be blind until the naming of the child was given. A similar problem arose when recounting events about the angel visiting Mary. The actual statements about Jesus were often very limited.
- (b) Some candidates seemed unable to go beyond stating that angels were messengers from God. However, there was a significant number who used material from Luke's entire Gospel and produced some very good answers.

Question 2

- (a) This was another popular question. However, a number of candidates confused the transfiguration with Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane. Of those that did recount the transfiguration event, a number ended with Moses and Elijah disappearing and omitted the voice from heaven stating Jesus as God's Son and the need to listen to him. Nevertheless, the majority of answers were detailed and accurate.
- (b) There were some good answers with candidates addressing both aspects of the question, though some were often limited in depth. A few candidates discussed the significance of the appearances of Moses and Elijah.

Question 3

- (a) Most candidates who attempted this question had good knowledge of the details, though some confused the parable of the Mustard Seed with other parables about growth.
- (b) The explanation of the Sower was generally well done, but some candidates struggled to comment on the parable of the Mustard Seed.

Question 4

- (a) Those candidates that related this miracle story were often confused with some of the details. In particular, the discussion between the synagogue ruler and Jesus was often conflated with other illustrations about the Sabbath.
- (b) This was generally well answered with good references made to other Sabbath conflict stories in Luke's Gospel. To access the full range of marks candidates needed to discuss more than the story they related in part (a).

Question 5

- (a) A number of candidates conflated material that was in other gospels. Others covered material that often ranged from the Last Supper to, and including, Jesus' death.
- This was not a popular question but there were some accurate answers.
- (b) This was generally well answered with a number of candidates showing a good knowledge of the background.

Section B

Question 6

- (a) This was a popular question and generally well answered, especially relating the events about the choosing of Matthias.
- (b) Many candidates limited their answer to just covering material in Acts 2:42-47 and omitted material such as persecutions, miracles and the growth of the church requiring developing organisation.

Question 7

- a) Both accounts were well known and generally well answered.
- (b) A number of candidates ignored the focus on "the influence on Peter and Paul" and tended to write in more general terms. There were also some good answers showing understanding of the situation of the expanding church.

Question 8

- (a) This was a popular question but the reference in the question to the healing of the slave girl seemingly distracted many candidates as they wrote at length of the healing rather than what happened after Paul and Silas were imprisoned. Candidates needed to avoid confusing the events in the prison with other accounts of miraculous escapes from prison.
- (b) Many candidates gave some good thoughtful answers. The higher level answers generally included references to other events in Acts concerning evil spirits. A few candidates wrote at length of events that are in Luke's Gospel and so could not be credited unless some general points were made that also applied to material in Acts.

Question 9

- (a) Only a few candidates attempted this question. Generally they gave good answers.
- (b) There were some good attempts at evaluating, considering both aspects of success and failure.

Question 10

- (a) This was only attempted by a few candidates. Most candidates displayed good knowledge of the text of the speech.
- (b) This produced some good answers with most candidates addressing both the "how" and the "why" aspects.

Luke and Acts (1-21:15) Essay Questions

General comments

Some candidates had detailed knowledge of the text and good understanding of the material. Their answers were focused and clearly expressed. It should be noted that the focus of the questions require more than general biblical knowledge. They require a detailed study including background and critical knowledge.

As in previous years, a number of candidates did not find the part (b) questions easy. The level descriptors make clear that level 3 and 4 involve more than a “purely descriptive approach”.

Comments on specific questions

Section A

Question 1

- (a) This was a popular question. Some candidates knew the events but did not include the significant words, whilst others only wrote about Simeon and omitted Anna. Also what Simeon actually said about Jesus was only briefly discussed.
- (b) Answers required more than just repetition of the events as the focus of the question was “what do we learn about Jesus”. There were some good answers that highlighted Jesus’ awareness of his status, his wisdom and his righteous anger. Good use of the text supported the answers.

Question 2

- (a) This was another popular question. Again, many candidates showed good knowledge of the text of Peter’s confession but struggled more when it came to recounting the prediction of the passion and Peter’s denial.
- (b) Some candidates having answered the two parts in (a) did not then answer part (b). It is important for candidates to read all parts of the question before embarking on the question, to make sure that they can answer all the parts.

There is a lot of additional material that candidates could have selected from including Peter’s call, the transfiguration and Peter’s initial disbelief in the resurrection.

Question 3

- (a) Most candidates who attempted this question had good knowledge of the details, though a few confused the parable of the two debtors with other parables.
- (b) Candidates needed to give more than a summary of the material in part (a). The question expected material to be drawn from the whole of Luke’s Gospel.

Question 4

- (a) Those candidates that attempted this question tended to know the details and gained high levels. The reaction of the people to the healing of the widow’s son was the most common omission.

- (b) Most candidates focused on Luke's interest in the poor, the outcasts and those seen by the religious as being rejected by God. A few referred to Luke's possible interest in healings as he was a doctor.

Question 5

- (a) Many candidates conflated material that was in other gospels. A few candidates confused the account with that of the Transfiguration.

However, there were also a number of very accurate answers.

- (b) This was generally not well answered. Most candidates struggled to go much beyond commenting that they were loyal to Jesus in being prepared to fight to save him.

Section B

Question 6

- (a) Candidates seemed confident in recounting the striking down of Ananias and Sapphira but struggled to say much about Aquila and Priscilla.

- (b) Many candidates just limited their answer to Acts 2:42-47 and omitted references to such things as the needs shown by the appointment of the Seven and the persecution that the followers experienced.

Question 7

- (a) This question was not popular. Candidates were unsure as to which prison escapes the question was referring to (as shown by some confusion by those who did answer this question).

- (b) This was not well answered with few candidates developing answers beyond stating that the writer was present at the times where the "we" passages occur.

Question 8

- (a) Very few candidates attempted this question. Those that did generally gave good answers.

- (b) Again, those few that attempted this question generally did well. They showed awareness of the different audiences and therefore the need to adapt the speech to suit the background and culture of the different listeners.

Question 9

- (a) There was some confusion as to which events were being referred to. Candidates seemed more confident about the events at Paphos than they did about the proceedings before Gallio.

- (b) This produced some good answers though some were limited in breadth. The higher level answers made reference to the text to support their argument.

Question 10

- (a) Candidates who attempted this question tended to limit their answer to either the sons of Sceva incident or Paul being accused of dishonouring Artemis.

- (b) Candidates tended to give only one view i.e. it was a success or it was a failure. Higher level answers considered that it had elements of both success and failure and attempted some weighing up as to which was the stronger outcome.
