SECTION A

Answer EITHER Question 1 OR Question 2.

1 Read the following poem.The Rear-Guard(Hindenburg Line, April 1917)

Groping along the tunnel, step by step,
 He winked his prying torch with patching glare
 From side to side, and sniffed the unwholesome air.

Tins, boxes, bottles, shapes too vague to know,
 A mirror smashed, the mattress from a bed;
 And he, exploring fifty feet below
 The rosy gloom of battle overhead.

Tripping, he grabbed the wall; saw someone lie
 Humped at his feet, half-hidden by a rug,
 And stooped to give the sleeper's arm a tug.
 'I'm looking for headquarters.' No reply.
 'God blast your neck!' (For days he'd had no sleep.)
 'Get up and guide me through this stinking place.'

Savage, he kicked a soft, unanswering heap,
 And flashed his beam across the livid* face
 Terribly glaring up, whose eyes yet wore
 Agony dying hard ten days before;
 And fists of fingers clutched a blackening wound.

Alone he staggered on until he found
 Dawn's ghost that filtered down a shafted stair
 To the dazed, muttering creatures underground
 Who hear the boom of shells in muffled sound.
 At last, with sweat of horror in his hair,
 He climbed through darkness to the twilight air,
 Unloading hell behind him step by step.

Siegfried Sassoon

2 Read the following extract from Jamaica Inn.

This extract is from the beginning of the novel; it describes a journey made in the 19th century by a young girl, Mary Yellan, to Jamaica Inn.

It was a cold grey day in late November. The weather had changed overnight, when a backing wind* brought a granite sky and mizzling* rain with it, and although it was now only a little after two o'clock in the afternoon the pallor of a winter evening seemed to have closed upon the hills, cloaking them in mist. It would be dark by four. The air was clammy cold, and for all the tightly closed windows it penetrated the interior of the coach. The leather seats felt damp to the hands, and there must have been a small crack in the roof, because now and again little drips of rain fell softly through, smudging the leather and leaving a dark-blue stain like a splodge of ink. The wind came in gusts, at times shaking the coach as it travelled round the bend of the road, and in the exposed places on the high ground it blew with such force that the whole body of the coach trembled and swayed, rocking between the high wheels like a drunken man.

The driver, muffled in a greatcoat to his ears, bent almost double in his seat in a faint endeavour to gain shelter from his own shoulders, while the dispirited horses plodded sullenly to his command, too broken by the wind and the rain to feel the whip that now and again cracked above their heads, while it swung between the numb fingers of the driver.

The wheels of the coach creaked and groaned as they sank into the ruts on the road, and sometimes they flung up the soft spattered mud against the windows, where it mingled with the constant driving rain, and whatever view there might have been of the countryside was hopelessly obscured.

The few passengers huddled together for warmth, exclaiming in unison when the coach sank into a heavier rut than usual, and one old fellow, who had kept up a constant complaint ever since he joined the coach at Truro, rose from his seat in a fury; and, fumbling with the window-sash, let the window down with a crash, bringing a shower of rain in upon himself and his fellow-passengers. He thrust his head out and shouted up to the driver, cursing him in a high petulant* voice for a rogue and a murderer; that they would all be dead before they reached Bodmin if he persisted at breakneck speed; they had no breath left in their bodies as it was, and he for one would never travel by coach again.

Daphne du Maurier
