[Helga Schmidt interviewed in 2005 for an academic book about her life in Nazi Germany]

One day a girl I knew came home from school feeling humiliated. She told me that the teacher had sent the Aryan children to one side of the classroom, and the non-Aryans to the other. Then the teacher told the Aryans to study the appearance of the others and to point out the marks of the Jewish race. The children had all played together as friends the day before.

Historians have made different interpretations about the most serious opposition to the Nazis during the Second World War.

The following pieces of evidence refer to opposition to the Nazi Party during the Second World War.

Study these and answer the question that follows.

Evidence 1

This interpretation is written by Frank McDonough, an academic historian, writing in an A Level textbook Hitler and Nazi Germany, published in 1999.

He argues that the most serious opposition to the Nazis during the war came from young people.

There were many young people who engaged in acts of defiance against the Nazi regime, such as distributing anti-Nazi leaflets. The most organised and effective opposition youth group was known as the Edelweiss Pirates. The Nazis tried to stop their activities and executed many. However the anti-Nazi youth groups continued to operate and created many problems for the Nazi party.

Evidence 2

This interpretation is from Otto John who was at the army headquarters in Berlin on the day of the assassination attempt on Hitler. He was writing in his memoirs published in 1972.

He argues that the most serious opposition to the Nazis during the war came from the military.

The most serious opposition to the Nazis came from the army. On 20 July, in the afternoon, Stauffenberg was next door telephoning. He waved to me and I watched what was going on. It never occurred to me that Hitler had survived the bomb. I was sure Hitler was dead, however later on that day Hitler spoke on the radio. We had come so close to killing him.

Evidence 3

This evidence is an extract from a White Rose pamphlet published in Munich in February 1943.

For us there can only be one cry. Fight against the Nazi Party! Give up your membership of Party organisations. The name of Germany will be stained forever unless the youth act now. Our present 'state' is a dictatorship of evil. Sabotage arms factories, meetings, festivals - anything which the Nazis have created.

- How far do you agree with this interpretation?
